New study shows human umbilical cord blood’s potential to rejuvenate learning and memory

By fusing two stem cell-derived neural spheroids, each containing a different type of human neuron, these researchers have uncovered a novel and personalized method for studying psychiatric disorders, learn more >

Taube Philanthropies makes gift to support collaborative Huntington’s disease research

A recent gift from Taube Philanthropies will support a collaboration between Stanford researchers and the Gladstone Institutes focused on research related to Huntington’s disease. The generous donation is a continuation of the foundation’s dedication to finding treatments and cures for neurodegenerative diseases. Learn more >

Notable Faculty News

Stanford researcher receives Fresenius Research Prize, world’s most valuable science award

A team of Stanford researchers has won the 2017 Fresenius Research Prize for their pioneering work in the field of biotechnology. The prize, which is given to scientists who have made outstanding scientific contributions that are of the highest possible value to the field of biotechnology, is one of the world’s most valuable for scientific achievement. The winner will receive $4.47 million. Learn more >

National Cancer Institute names two Stanford researchers Outstanding Investigators

Ronald Levy, MD, and Howard Chang, MD, PhD, have recently been named Outstanding Investigators by the National Cancer Institute. The grants of up to $7 million over six years are awarded to investigators with outstanding track records of productivity in cancer research to support the advancement of the nation’s cancer research.  Learn more >

Recent Events

Fifth annual Health Matters community day attracts record crowds to campus

By bringing together some of the brightest minds in science, medicine, and disease prevention, not just waiting for illness to strike. And when it does, to provide the best care available. At this year’s Big Data in Biomedicine Conference, held May 24-25 at the Li Ka Shing Center for Learning and Innovation, faculty and staff gathered to share the latest research on how big data is transforming cancer care, biomedical research, precision health and personalized medicine at Stanford Hospital, and many other priorities across Stanford Medicine. To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

If you answered yes to the question, you have a strong interest in donating to support the mission of the Stanford Medical Center. You may have received a direct mail solicitation or phoned solicitation that have a general message at 844.427.3491. Should you wish not to receive any fundraising communications from Stanford Medical Center Development, you may also indicate that preference.

Watch replays of the presentations online >

Fifth annual Health Matters community day attracts record crowds to campus

By bringing together some of the brightest minds in science, medicine, and disease prevention, not just waiting for illness to strike. And when it does, to provide the best care available. At this year’s Big Data in Biomedicine Conference, held May 24-25 at the Li Ka Shing Center for Learning and Innovation, faculty and staff gathered to share the latest research on how big data is transforming cancer care, biomedical research, precision health and personalized medicine at Stanford Hospital, and many other priorities across Stanford Medicine. To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

If you answered yes to the question, you have a strong interest in donating to support the mission of the Stanford Medical Center. You may have received a direct mail solicitation or phoned solicitation that have a general message at 844.427.3491. Should you wish not to receive any fundraising communications from Stanford Medical Center Development, you may also indicate that preference.

Watch replays of the presentations online >

Fifth annual Health Matters community day attracts record crowds to campus

By bringing together some of the brightest minds in science, medicine, and disease prevention, not just waiting for illness to strike. And when it does, to provide the best care available. At this year’s Big Data in Biomedicine Conference, held May 24-25 at the Li Ka Shing Center for Learning and Innovation, faculty and staff gathered to share the latest research on how big data is transforming cancer care, biomedical research, precision health and personalized medicine at Stanford Hospital, and many other priorities across Stanford Medicine. To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

If you answered yes to the question, you have a strong interest in donating to support the mission of the Stanford Medical Center. You may have received a direct mail solicitation or phoned solicitation that have a general message at 844.427.3491. Should you wish not to receive any fundraising communications from Stanford Medical Center Development, you may also indicate that preference.

Watch replays of the presentations online >

Fifth annual Health Matters community day attracts record crowds to campus

By bringing together some of the brightest minds in science, medicine, and disease prevention, not just waiting for illness to strike. And when it does, to provide the best care available. At this year’s Big Data in Biomedicine Conference, held May 24-25 at the Li Ka Shing Center for Learning and Innovation, faculty and staff gathered to share the latest research on how big data is transforming cancer care, biomedical research, precision health and personalized medicine at Stanford Hospital, and many other priorities across Stanford Medicine. To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

If you answered yes to the question, you have a strong interest in donating to support the mission of the Stanford Medical Center. You may have received a direct mail solicitation or phoned solicitation that have a general message at 844.427.3491. Should you wish not to receive any fundraising communications from Stanford Medical Center Development, you may also indicate that preference.

Watch replays of the presentations online >

Fifth annual Health Matters community day attracts record crowds to campus

By bringing together some of the brightest minds in science, medicine, and disease prevention, not just waiting for illness to strike. And when it does, to provide the best care available. At this year’s Big Data in Biomedicine Conference, held May 24-25 at the Li Ka Shing Center for Learning and Innovation, faculty and staff gathered to share the latest research on how big data is transforming cancer care, biomedical research, precision health and personalized medicine at Stanford Hospital, and many other priorities across Stanford Medicine. To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

If you answered yes to the question, you have a strong interest in donating to support the mission of the Stanford Medical Center. You may have received a direct mail solicitation or phoned solicitation that have a general message at 844.427.3491. Should you wish not to receive any fundraising communications from Stanford Medical Center Development, you may also indicate that preference.

Watch replays of the presentations online >

Fifth annual Health Matters community day attracts record crowds to campus

By bringing together some of the brightest minds in science, medicine, and disease prevention, not just waiting for illness to strike. And when it does, to provide the best care available. At this year’s Big Data in Biomedicine Conference, held May 24-25 at the Li Ka Shing Center for Learning and Innovation, faculty and staff gathered to share the latest research on how big data is transforming cancer care, biomedical research, precision health and personalized medicine at Stanford Hospital, and many other priorities across Stanford Medicine. To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.

If you answered yes to the question, you have a strong interest in donating to support the mission of the Stanford Medical Center. You may have received a direct mail solicitation or phoned solicitation that have a general message at 844.427.3491. Should you wish not to receive any fundraising communications from Stanford Medical Center Development, you may also indicate that preference.