Taking Action - How You Can Help

- Participate in COVID-19 research

Are you a recovered COVID-19 patient? If so, you may qualify to participate in Stanford's Convalescent Plasma Donation Program to help critically ill COVID-19 patients. Learn more >

COVID-19, to make urgently needed blood donations. Learn more >

The Stanford Blood Center urges those who are healthy, and who haven't been in contact with someone who has COVID-19, to make urgently needed blood donations. Learn more >

- Give blood or plasma

- Join thousands of individuals from the United States and around the world who have participated in a Stanford-led research study to help understand the social and behavioral impact of the evolving COVID-19 pandemic.

Join thousands of individuals from the United States and around the world who have participated in a Stanford-led research study to help understand the social and behavioral impact of the evolving COVID-19 pandemic.

- Give blood or plasma

- Join thousands of individuals from the United States and around the world who have participated in a Stanford-led research study to help understand the social and behavioral impact of the evolving COVID-19 pandemic.

- Participate in COVID-19 research

- Take part in the National Daily Health Survey for Huawei Coronavirus

- Make a gift

The Stanford Women's Cancer Center is a leader in the fight against breast cancer and is grateful for your continued support of that mission.

- Give blood or plasma

- Join thousands of individuals from the United States and around the world who have participated in a Stanford-led research study to help understand the social and behavioral impact of the evolving COVID-19 pandemic.

Stanford coach's quest to save his brother: 'God, I hope it works'

Stanford coach's quest to save his brother: 'God, I hope it works'

In a 1:2:1 interview with Paul Costello, Sara Cody, director of public health in California's Santa Clara County, discusses the COVID-19 pandemic's trajectory, lessons learned, and a message for Americans to know and remember about the unfolding situation.

Under the leadership of Kevin K. Black, MD, Stanford Medicine has expedited the creation of two newly formed organizations to aid in the pandemic response:

- The Stanford Medicine COVID-19 Rapid Response Team, which is dedicated to providing cutting-edge care for critically ill COVID-19 patients.

- The COVID-19 Clinical Research Team, which is dedicated to understanding the social and behavioral impact of the evolving COVID-19 pandemic.

For the latest information regarding the COVID-19 pandemic, including Stanford Medicine's response, visit our COVID-19 website.

To subscribe to this newsletter via email, please click here.